

Catherine Edmonds

Bio

Catherine Edmonds, Ed.S. serves as the Director of Educational Leadership at UNC General Administration. She earned a BA in Mathematics Education from North Carolina A&T State University. She received her MSA from North Carolina State University where she is currently working on her doctoral degree in Educational Administration and Supervision. Ms. Edmonds was the recipient of the 2013-2014 Wilcox-Hodnett Doctoral Fellowship for Public School Administrators in North Carolina. Ms. Edmonds has over 24 years of experience in public education. Before assuming her current position, she was the Director and Executive Coach of the Northeast Leadership Academy District and School Transformation at North Carolina State University where she provided professional development, coaching, and technical assistance to aspiring school leaders in high-need schools. Prior to her service with NELA, Edmonds served as the District Transformation Coach Team Lead and Halifax Lead for the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction (NCDPI). In that position, she led reform efforts to turn around low-performing schools and improve educational outcomes for under-performing students. In 2012, the District and School Transformation Halifax Team received the State Superintendent's Team Leadership Award. Ms. Edmonds has served in the role of high school math teacher, assistant principal, principal of a redesign high school, program director at North Carolina New Schools Project and area superintendent.