

Dr. James Ellerbe

James Ellerbe, Ed.D, began his career serving in the United States Army where he was named Soldier of the Month, Soldier of the Quarter, and Soldier of the Year. He received a Bachelor's degree in Middle School Education from Fayetteville State University and a Masters in Educational Administration and Leadership. He was a principal in a middle and high school in Cumberland County, NC. Dr. Ellerbe received his Doctorate degree in Educational Leadership and Supervision at NC State University. He is a District Transformation Coach with the NC Department of Public Instruction and a Teaching Assistant Professor at NC State University. His research interests include curriculum and instruction, single-gender education, education administration, education of children of poverty, and district and school transformation.